Category:Marathi-language magazines Category:Indian monthly magazines Category:Indian literary magazines Category:Magazines established in 1987 The trial court correctly denied the motion. II (8) Defendants seek a new trial on the issue of damages upon a ground stated for the first time in their motion for a new trial, viz, that the amount of the verdict was so great as to be the result of passion and prejudice on the part of the jury. The motion is based on two affidavits, one by Dr. Hetzel, one of the defendants' physicians, and the other by one of the plaintiffs' physicians, Dr. M. L. Gai. The trial court found, as a matter of law, that the verdict was within the range of evidence and reasonable inferences therefrom. In their brief defendants state that they "do not intend to reiterate the arguments they made to the trial court in their motion and supporting brief on the issue of passion and prejudice." The gist of the argument made in the trial court was that this was a case where the only real issue was not, as it might be in an ordinary negligence case, whether or not there was a duty to use reasonable care in diagnosis and treatment of plaintiff's diseased lung, but was whether or not defendant was negligent in the treatment that was given. This is not an issue in a malpractice case. Proof of malpractice is not a requisite to recovery. Proof of the injuries and damages sustained is all 570a42141b
