Bright and shiny, with a black border, the punkish Angry Birds Slingshot launcher will satisfy fans of the popular Angry Birds app. The icon itself is made of a bright yellow colored spiky alien with a black skull and an indigo bag, which is quite literally suspended in front of an orange burst grenade. The icon is rendered in PNG format at 250x250 px, and a 1024x1024 version is also provided. The download also includes wallpapers in a collection of different sizes. You may also like these icon sets: For a few years now I've been playing a game that takes a lot of time, dedication, and creativity. I call it the game of design. This is where you get into some high level topics like typography, layout, or color theory. But the focus of this post is making a different kind of game: this time, the game of making icons. I'll first talk about the background of why I decided to make my own set of icons, and then dive into how I went about designing them. One of the most prominent criticisms I've ever read about web sites is that they're "cluttered." The same idea is sometimes extended to other design contexts (especially graphic design) that suggests that one should avoid clutter, and opt instead for a minimalist approach. This is a tricky subject, and there's certainly something to this idea, but I think it's best to take it with a grain of salt. Cluttered or not, cluttered is always better than boring. This is a massive set of 57 icons for the icon set containing them all, so they're easily manageable as a big icon library. Iconography and Spriting has always been one of my favorite things to do, but with the release of Moq Design, I've been focusing a lot of attention towards that area. So, I took the opportunity to create this huge icon collection, and bundled them all together. There are a few details about this icon set, for example, the icon sets contain high quality PNGs, and includes various high resolution wallpapers. Enjoy!
