The aim of this study was to investigate the effect of high intensity laser therapy (HILT) on the tensile strength of the skin of the ankle region. A total of 44 patients were included in the study. The patients were divided into two groups; a treatment group (n: 23) that received a low intensity laser therapy (LILT) and a control group (n: 21) that received the no treatment. The patients were treated for 5 sessions with a 3-day interval between each session. The patients were exposed to laser of wavelength of 808 nm, duration of 10 s/point with a power density of 3.16 W/cm2. The skin tensile strength of the ankle region was measured by a tensiometer. The Kruskal-Wallis test was used to compare the means of the measured tensile strength of the groups. Significant differences were noted among the groups (P=0.001) and between the treated and untreated groups (P=0.002). Within the groups, significant differences were identified between the first and second measurements (P=0.001 and P=0.001, respectively) and between the second and third measurements (P=0.001 and P=0.002, respectively). HILT increased the strength of the skin of the ankle region.U13 Girls Soccer Team Grades: OFFENSE # 3da54e8ca3
