We work on the top third of our self esteem and on the bottom two thirds of our emotional maturity. We need to become more interested in what we know and less interested in the places we want to go. For starters, we need to learn to ask. Have you ever asked someone why something works or doesn't work? Asking questions, especially deep, honest questions, is a big part of becoming a thinking, not a "thinks." We also need to practice our focus and self regulation. When we do it right we can be really effective. We can also be really effective at not doing it right. We need to become very good at the latter. Self awareness is another part of making a good life decision. We need to know how we feel and why we feel that way. And why we have and have not acted on that feeling. We need to be less interested in what we don't know and more interested in what we do know. We need to realize that we are a lot more qualified to act on what we know and less qualified to think about what we don't know. We need to have some community. We need to be around people that have the same goals as we do and who share the same values. We
