Blocks — allows combining simple geometric elements into more complex building blocks. Many dimensions can be changed, and the basic shape of each element can be altered easily. User-defined automation and macro recording — which lets users record a procedure they want to automate and can be used either on drawings or with commands in the drawing. Acrobat plug-ins — used by Autodesk PDF for creating PDF documents. Embarcadero Rave DHTML/XML Builder — a plug-in to create DHTML, XML and XHTML pages, which can be embedded in AutoCAD drawings. Flow tools — used by Autodesk Flow for creating flowcharts and network diagrams. Drawing tools In the R12.2 release of AutoCAD, a number of enhancements were made to the 3D editing features of AutoCAD, namely the enhanced surface editing functions such as Arc, Circle, Cylinder, Surface, Surface Spline, Surface Width Extraction, Shell, and Surface Offset. Geometric modeling and editing 2D editing There are many functions for editing features in 2D including chamfering, extruding, filleting, shearing, notching, trimming, trimming arc, trimming curve, rotational, and scaling. 3D editing 3D printing After AutoCAD 2010, Autodesk launched a subscription-based service named AutoCAD 360 through Autodesk 360. In May 2013, Autodesk released a subscription-based service called Autodesk 360 that includes AutoCAD software along with 360-degree images, 3D renderings and 360-degree videos. AutoCAD 360 provides access to photographs taken on a mobile device and turned into 360-degree stereoscopic images in 3D. Macro recorder Autodesk has a Macro Recorder built into AutoCAD. The macro recorder enables users to capture, edit, store, and playback macros to automate repetitive drawing tasks. Macros are also useful for prototyping, eliminating the need to draw manually. It is possible to run macros when the cursor is not located at a command. AutoCAD supports several languages for creating macros including VBA, Visual LISP, AutoLISP, and AutoMacro. There are two ways to use the macro recorder: Record a command (like DRAWSHEET) and then run that command 5b5f913d15
