Might just be the coolest video converter ever. (A Decibel of Impressions) This little software sits inside your system tray, and watches you from down there. When it sees that you have a video file on your Windows clipboard, it copies that file to your hard drive. Or, it can transcode the video if you select this option. It even has a cool marble background you can rotate. Something for everyone. IPHONE 1

Description: A true mobile application. iPhone1 is a fully featured parental control application for the iPhone that enables you to block inappropriate internet content, track time, and monitor your child's web usage. In order to get the best performance from your new computer or laptop, it is extremely important to follow the recommendations of the manufacturer. However, it can be hard to do this, especially if the manual is in another language. Here are the top 10 mistakes computer users make with their new laptops. Most Laptops come with Windows preinstalled, so once you're done installing your desktop operating system, you should consider installing 3rd party anti-malware software, such as MalwareBytes. This software will help protect your system from spyware, viruses, and other malicious software. 1. Neglecting to Backup! Even if you don't have room for a 1TB drive in your laptop, you should still make regular backups of all your most important files. The best place to put your data is on an external hard drive, or maybe a memory card, but remember that USB ports and other connections may not be compatible with all devices. 2. Formatting the Drive First! If you don't back up your files before formatting the drive, you may lose files that are important to you. You should consider making regular backups of your files before formatting your laptop's hard drive.

3. Not Installing a Firewall A good firewall is vital, especially if you're sharing files or using a wireless network. It is also wise to set up your firewall at the same time you set up your operating system. A firewall is also useful if you want to use a public wireless network.

4. Using a Dell or HP Graphics Card

In most cases, HP or Dell laptops come with Intel graphics cards, and since these are much cheaper than graphics cards from other manufacturers, it can be tempting to use a Dell or
